Osiris/Ausar (Ancient African King/Institutor of Divine Kingship & Cosmic Representative of the God Man): The iron smelts, it smelts, Osiris smelts the iron. And the day of purification, of alchemy, is here. A time of removing and distinguishing between the purified and the unpurified substance. Awakening isn't going to be easy for many people. A lot of pain due to attachment. Your worldview will collapse in exchange for a purer and truer worldview, a worldview more aligned with the spirit of the race of god men/women. Awaken, or else it will be too heavy to bear the earth's changes in terms of natural disasters, wars, climate changes and other bizarre events. It is only the beginning. A shift is occurring. A shift is now and we are turning the wheels, accelerating this process, making this happen.

My Journey

This is only a snapshot. The complete story of my spiritual journey so far will require an entire book, but hopefully, this will provide enough information to give the reader a sense of where I have been. As a spiritual seeker, my journey, some of you will find, is similar to yours.

I was born and raised Catholic, but was always fascinated by mysticism and spent a lot of my time studying the lives of saints like Maria Goretti and St. Theresa of the Child Jesus. However, my religious life underwent a major transformation when I stumbled upon a Buddhism pamphlet at my place of work some years ago. Inscribed in the pamphlet were the six principles of Buddhism. One of the principles was that attachment to one's desires was the root of all suffering. Another principle that captured my attention was that it was the illusion of separation (from God/source) that caused suffering. At the time, I was undergoing a painful breakup and needed an escape from the emotional torture I had been experiencing. Somehow, those principles resonated with me and were used as stepping stones to heal from that relationship.

My discovery of Buddhism led me to study other religions such as Hinduism and Islam. I began to study and take meditation classes after reading an autobiography by one of India's prolific mystics, Paramanansa Yogananda. The book was titled, "Autobiography of a Yogi." That one could experience lasting peace in a fleeting world intrigued me. This was the mystic path, the end result of all proper religious practice. The book also validated my instinctive belief that there was more than one path to God, something that traditional Christianity, unfortunately, does not espouse. Jesus Christ, the spiritual being behind Christianity, I still believe, was a man of God, and even Christ. But he was not the only man of God or only Christ. There have been other Christs before him and after him. Exploring other religions and systems made me realize this fundamental principle.

Connecting To the Ancestral Tradition.

It took me a while, I must admit, to connect to the ancestral tradition. But the ancestors and spirits were calling. They appeared to me through signs and dreams and messages implanted in my subconscious. Being raised in a strict Christian background and still working on deprogramming my mind, I took my time and made sure I understood what Omenala was about, what African traditional systems entailed, for I was raised to believe that our ancestral traditions were evil or idolatry. However, it was after I underwent reproductive and stomach problems some years ago that I began having more frequent visitations in the spirit realms. Evil spirits/forces began making their appearance, making it clear to me that they had played a role in my illnesses. By the grace of God, the Divine Mother also began appearing to me in her many forms and it was during that period I realized that the secret to my recovery and a fulfilling life was complete devotion to her. It was then that I turned to Omenala, the honoring of the divine Mother Earth and the divine ancestors together with the Great Spirit, Chukwu. This also led to a deeper connection to my patron deity, the primordial ocean goddess, Onishe, or as she is known by the Yoruba people, Yemonja.

I believe the reason why many of us, many African people, do not trust our ancestral tradition is because along the way we allowed our systems to be polluted so that the higher principles, the higher teachings of love, service and unity, of godliness, have either been lost or stifled. Our practices have often been reduced to bad juju, bad voodoo and other nonsense that have nothing to do with sacred African science. Now is the time to study our tradition and in so doing, open ourselves to higher revelation on how we can transcend aspects of our traditions that need transcending and how we can preserve and maintain aspects of it that need to be maintained. Now is the time, or else we will be left with an incomplete system like Christianity and Islam that is not purely indigenous to us and, therefore, can not do much to uplift us in a holistic way. Our divine ancestors are alive and well and long to communicate with us about our powerful and transcendent nature.

How This Book Came About

I knew concretely this book was meant to be written and published on New Year's Eve of 2010.

Every New Year's Eve, I take time to meditate and/or pray to usher in the New Year. Performing this ritual enables me to reflect on the mistakes and mishaps of the previous year and to make enlightened resolutions for the upcoming one. Close to midnight on December 31st 2010, I sat in bed, played some meditation music and began to meditate. It did not take long for me to have a vision. In that vision, Osiris, the Egyptian god, originally known as Ausar/W'Sir, appeared to me. He was very dark in complexion. He showed me a pyramid city, claiming that the city was the real Africa and that the real Africa could never be invaded or exploited by outsiders. He showed me some other things which I reveal in this book. The key aspect of this vision was that he handed me a crystal pyramid after I had asked him for knowledge.

A few days later, another incident occurred while connecting with the spirit of Onishe by my altar. Onishe is the mother goddess to the Asaba people of Delta State, Nigeria, from where I originate. She is in fact the spirit of Isis as I discuss in this book.

As I was praying, I had a vision of Isis as Onishe. She had on a white flowing dress and was walking on water. She handed me a book. After the vision, I knew right there and then that I was being instructed by both Osiris and Isis, the divine pair, to transcribe knowledge that would be coming my way. My instincts proved correct for shortly after information began flooding in. Divine beings began making their appearance and revealing things to me. I got comfortable enough to ask questions about issues concerning African/black people. The more questions I asked, the more information they revealed (and continue to reveal). What you have here is a byproduct of some of those encounters and experiences.

Onishe As My Main Alusi

Every person has a main deity governing their head. Usually one's personality, drive, ambition and so on provide clues to which deity primarily presides over them. However, most people have to consult a seer or Dibia to discover theirs. For me, it took intuitive insights and my own personal observations to discover who my patron deity was. I am a woman who is by nature nurturing, caring and sweet. The deity that represents these qualities is the river goddess and earth goddess, and indeed I was born to represent both. My connection with Onishe was further heightened when towards the end of my first formal initiation Onishe mounted me and spoke to the Priestess and I for an entire hour! That wasn't the first time she had mounted me. She had taken over me for a few minutes in trance states prior to that day, but it was during that initiation that she came through so powerfully that I knew this was what my life was about, to represent her. She also spoke to me and the Priestess revealing that divination and prophecy was my mission in life, and many other things, which I do not feel I should share here. Needless to say, there was no turning back after that. I understood that to not follow your divine mission was to fall into frustrations and in worst case scenarios, unexplainable illnesses and financial setbacks. The former and the latter I had already undergone only a few years prior to my decision to undergo the intensive cleansing/initiation ritual.

Channeling Spirits

Of course after Onishe came through during my initiation revealing my mission, I made some changes. Under the direction of my divine ancestors, I acquired a medicine bag with divination tools. Of course, Onishe herself began coming through more frequently and in time, other divine beings began to manifest as well, including Ikenga, god of industry and success; Osiris/Ele, the god-man; Eke, the supreme mother goddess; Ani, mother earth and so on. I have also had visitations from Anyanwu, the solar deity. He has a way of letting some sunlight shine through the window curtain whenever I am at a critical transitional phase in my life to remind me that all is well and that things will soon improve. I have been blessed with the ability to tune into higher realms at this stage in my development. I have always had the ability to tune into other realms ever since I was a child. In fact, I should have been declared a seer from about three years old, but that is another story for another day.

Some readers might wonder what it means to channel. Well, we channel constantly when we attune ourselves to energy frequencies. Everything is energy as science teaches us. It is however the responsibility of the seer, diviner, prophet (all of us on the spiritual path, really) to channel pure, sacred energies. The deities, just as each of us, operate on energy frequencies. One's spiritual, mental and emotional state (and in a lot of cases, physical state too), affects their tendency to attune to high or low frequency energy, which is why deep meditation, spiritual baths, sacred music and chants and so on are essential before beginning a channeling session.

Now to the meat of this book!

Side Note: The following channeled messages have a conversational tone and do not always follow syntax. It is for this reason they should be read from the heart and not merely from the intellect. Also, when the term African people is used, the Alusi is referring to all people of African descent wherever they may be found and to people to whom the message applies. It is also important to note that the messages here do not contain everything that can be said about a particular topic. To do so will require volumes of written materials. Please consider these revelations as snapshots of a greater knowledge that is infinite. And one more thing: Please refer to the end of the book for definitions and general information on Igbo cosmogony, some deities of which I mentioned in this book.

Nsibidi: Heart with True Love

Water and Life

The moon (onwa), represents the moon goddess and the Ocean represents Onishe or Isis. All that we need to know about the mysteries of the universe is within us and all around us for the energies/elements that make us up is the same elements that make up the universe.

Just as water is credited for the initiation of life on earth and our survival, water spirits such as Onishe are also credited for the same things. Water deities reside and preside over the water realms and since human beings are about seventy percent water, it means they reside in us as well. Just as we cannot do without water, we cannot do without the water spirits whose roles are to heal, purify and provide nourishment, life, health, fertility and abundance. Without water, the aforementioned is not possible which is why many indigenous societies value the divine water spirits.

Onishe, Mouth of the Ocean (Afa, Logos)

Onishe: I am Onishe, oracle of god, oracle of the living dead known as the wise ones, the elders, the Ndiiche. I am Onishe, an oracle goddess/god. I am a messenger of the divine. I am god/dess. I am navel chakra, navel center of the earth from where earth's wisdom emerges. I am Onishe, mouth of the ocean, mouth of the primordial and essential sea and river of life, which is life. I am life itself. The source. The beginning and end. I am in all and all is in me.

I am a prophetess, a chosen one, selected apart by god/dess to speak the words of god/dess. I am manifestation of god/dess as I surrender each moment to my essential nature. I am speaker of life and death. Avenger for the just, the pure, the clean. There is only one Onishe and she is here and now, in you, and in many. I am the Word that forms everything. Logos, Mami Wata, Supreme Water, Liquid Essence, Nut of Khemet. I am the Word of Nut, the goddess of creation.

Onishe, The River Niger and the Atlantic

My higher self and Onishe: (From a vision). Onishe with a crown of sea shell, at the bottom of the Atlantic Ocean. She is goddess of the Atlantic Ocean as well, making her mother to all. Under the ocean are cities with advanced technologies. The water radiates a lime greenish hue. The water is a physical dwelling place and representation of the cosmic ocean. It is from the oceans, the primordial waters of the Sirius star that mermaids and mermen descended upon the earth, setting up watery portals through which men could interact with them and vice versa. The Atlantic was the first landing of the mothers of light. Water realm is source of life. The river Niger and the Nile were once connected, are one river of life. They are both sacred waters with global prominence and popularity. Both birth places of Mama Africa's civilization, both sisters, the waters, of each other. The Atlantic, when Africa was first thought of, first emerged, I and the daughters of the moon and the lords of fire planned our arrival on this very spot and planted the seeds of your civilization. And we are still here, we still rule our realms, we are still worshipped, we are still dictating, we are gods and goddesses of earth.

Who Resides In the Water Realms?

Onishe: Water goddesses/gods. They are genderless, androgynous, holders of mysteries and wisdom. Mermaids and mermen as well as human beings who have made ways through a dial in consciousness (usually after death or by magic even while not dead in the physical realm) to reside and continue the work of kingdom building for as water dwellers we are constantly moving and flowing in our culture, in our civilizations. All the water gods you can think of with their many attributes; Onishe, Oya, Olukon, Idemilli...even ones unknown for some have chosen anonymity in their work, service and direction of human affairs. And of course people like you and many others who come from the water realms and incarnate in the physical world for different reasons. Some of the reasons are curiosity, service, sometimes, honestly, temporary banishment -- -but not as you know banishment to mean. When the consciousness no longer matches the realm or the space or energies around you, you are automatically drawn or shipped to another reality. We are constantly changing realities. Water dwellers, Earth dwellers, Fire spirits, Air spirits etc...

The Mother On the Niger Delta Oil Spills

The Niger Delta is a region in Southwest Nigeria that has garnered world attention for decades due to the environmental pollution it has suffered in the hands of oil companies like Shell and Chevron in collaboration with the Nigerian government. In 1995, an Environmentalist, Ken Saro Wiwa, and eight others were executed by the Nigerian government for their role in demonstrating and campaigning against the pollution of the Ogoni region of the Niger Delta. This execution brought further global attention to the crises, leading many Human Rights organizations to condemn the act. Thousands of demonstrators and other innocent men, women and children have been killed by Nigerian soldiers hired by these oil companies over the years. Even though little has been done to improve infrastructure in the areas affected by oil spills, the Niger Delta has continued to gain worldwide attention and is often cited as an extreme example of the ills of multinational corporations combined with imperialism. The British Petroleum (BP) oil spill that occurred in 2010 is another event that angered millions of people world wide. Tons of oil was leaked into the Gulf of Mexico, the explosion that occurred before it, killing a handful of workers on site. The oil ended up destroying and polluting millions of fish and other sea creatures. Today, the company still struggles with effective clean up methods.

Onishe: Over here, in our world, there are no oil spills. In our world, there are pristine, living waters. In our world there is wholeness, purity, freedom from constraints and limitations. In our world we are playful and frivolous, with the powerful and terrifying mother (for she is truth), watching on.

The oil spill hurts the mother because it hurts you as her children. The oil spill pains the mother because it pains her children, the plant life, animals, and birds and fishes...the air too. It hurts the elemental life, little, pristine creatures that serve the mother (as Ani) purely and serve humans with no demands, performing their activities in silence while people spill oil...

[At this point, a sudden shift takes place and Kali/Eke takes over, speaking in third person for her energy is too intense for me to fully take on. In fact her energy is so intense the rosary I am wearing around my neck mysteriously breaks apart, leaving the beads spilling all over the floor]

Kali/Eke: Kali is mad, very mad. She wishes to destroy the illusion the big corporations make in thinking they can just take from the mother like that and take from her children... in thinking they can just loot and exploit and dig up the hearth of the mother without consequence. Who do they think they are? Kali is mad! She wishes to cut them up, their illusions, their lies, their greed, their selfishness. She wishes to cut them, cut them, cut them to pieces... their worlds, their companies, their organizations, their systems, their structures, from behind the scene to the scene itself. She wishes to cut up and destroy it all!

They will end their reign. They will drown in their lies, their selfishness, their greed... This shall be their reward in this world and if not, in the after life. Their day shall come.

Niger Delta Oil spills and environmental pollutions must be an African and global concern. They, we, me acting in them, must act. Oya [Yoruba storm and sea goddess] must act. Shango [Yoruba god of thunder and lightening] must act. Onishe must act too. Oh, prophets must speak on this... speak vengeance, speak punishment, speak righteousness and justice over the situation. Righteous anger is no sin. What is being done to the land is an abomination, a crime against Ani, the earth mother. A crime to humanity and all life on earth. They must pay and it is people like you with clean hands who must speak justice to the situation. Priests must speak. Righteous people must speak. Victims must speak and keep speaking but in love, in power, not in fear or powerlessness. They must speak with command, loving command. They must speak ofo na ogu, truth and justice... they must speak Kamalu to this situation. The time is now, now, now. Always now. What has been done so far is clearly not enough. However, people are doing their best with what they have and their efforts must be respected. However, as spiritual people, as priests, as people walking towards love, towards truth, towards me... you must speak with righteous wrath that comes from balanced love. It must come from balanced love otherwise whatever you send forth, will come back to you and you don't want that...

2012-Beyond: What It Means For Africans/the World

For the past few years and even decades, the year, 2012, has garnered greater attention among spiritualists, conspiracy theorists and even some pseudo-scientists. Around the world, ancient texts and monoliths have cited 2012 to be the year that the world ends. The Maya, a group in the Americas, who in ancient times were experts at astronomy, reveal that their ancestors believed that in 2012, one of their chief gods would return to earth. Ancient Egyptian and even Indian records depict 2012 as the end of an era and in a sense, the beginning of a new one. December 2012 is also gaining more attention from the scientific community because it is expected that a solar flare might occur around that time affecting our current electrical wiring resulting in a dark age of some sort. While there are those who look forward to the planet entering a possible golden age, still there are others who are concerned about the potential for greater economic and ecological disaster.

Onishe: I am here. I, Onishe, and many others. We are here with the mother (Eke), the supreme of all in her ferocious and powerful deep and mysterious nature. She is truth itself. Remember I am Logos, the Word. I am her aspect as that (divination, prophecy) as well as many more, which I will not go into now. But....

[For a few minutes she speaks Igbo]

Ndiiche no eba.

The ancestors are here

Ndi obi nso, ndi obi oma, ndi mara mma, no eba.

The pure souls, the good souls, the beautiful ones are here.

O gini bu 2012?

What is 2012?

2012 bu oge ocha. O bu oge di mkpa maka ndi mmadu ga eyi ocha. Obi ha gi di ocha mgbe ha choro ifu mu n'anya.

2012 is a time of purity. It is an important time because people shall wear purity. Their hearts will be pure when they are ready to look me in the eye (or face/ love me).

Anyi no eba. Ndi nso no eba. Anyi na ekwu na 2012 bu oge ocha, oge ndi mmadu ga afu'm na'anya. Ndi mmadu achoghi ifu'm na anya ga afu amadioha, fa ga afu ogu, fa ga afu njo.

We are here. The holy ones are here. We are saying that 2012 is a time of purity, a time when people will see/face me. People who are not willing to see/face me, will see Amadioha (god of justice), they will see justice, they will see evil.

Mana o ga adi mma na uwa ndi nwere obi oma. O ga kachisi mma... kachisi ndi nwere obi ojo.

But it will be well in the world of those with pure hearts. They will fare better than those whose hearts are evil.

African people shall be forced to come together. They must come together to survive as a people. It is their year of trial, their season of tests like they have not seen in recent times (For Africans in America since the civil rights era). It shall be a period of turbulence if they do not come together, if they do not unite for the benefit of themselves and the whole world. They have a role to play. It is time to awaken to that role no longer as victims, but as victors and pioneers and teachers. They must stand up as authoritarians, as teachers of humanity... A big brother of humanity is perhaps a better term. We all know the earliest of history goes back to Africa. So this is beyond race or politics or clan or whatever. In our world, these things mean nothing to us. This is about every group of people having a responsibility and Africans needing to fulfill theirs for it is time. To not do so will lead to greater problems, I am afraid.

As for the world, the same message applies. All must awaken to their potential. All must awaken or die metaphorically. It is the time, the setting, for all to evolve, for all to fulfill their roles on this planet. So stop wasting time and heed the signs!

Osiris: Khem, Osiris... my names are many and names are only constructs for at times we get stuck in them. But I am the one who sponsors the black race, the African race, and in a sense, all races for I am in all peoples. I am in and with Africa but not as long as ignorance prevails. For Khem, Osiris, Ausar, etc, can truly only manifest when as a collective, more of us, of you, realize your divinity.

The Lord of The 3's: Is benevolent. Is God of creativity. I am he, Lord of the 3's and your mothers observe as I speak. We stand here, beside the Igbo people for they as Ikengas are business minded and ambitious, but they must learn about service or rather, be more open to service, to life, to community. The get quick rich schemes must end and must be transformed into a better mind, a righteous mind, a mind that can balance out and not subdue their mother aspect and mothers/women in general.

Lemuria/Atlantis, Africa's Past Golden Age/s and Why She Fell

Many Spiritualists believe that the Golden Age draws near. The Golden Age, they claim, is a period where abundance, righteous living, advanced technology and other advancements will become a reality just as in the distant past.

The Golden Age is a reality that is possible but, according to the ancestors, it can only be made possible through our free will choices. In the distant past, Golden Age civilizations like Lemuria and Atlantis, flourished and then disappeared mysteriously. Lemuria and Atlantis has fascinated many, inspiring films and books. But these civilizations, according to the ancients, were real and not a work of fiction and their stories could serve as lessons for us today.

Evidence of a Golden Age can be found among the ruins and sands located in different parts of the continent. In her books, They Lived Before Adam and The Lost Testament, Researcher and Author, Catherine Acholonu, described Igbo Ukwu and Nok, two major archaeological sites in Nigeria, as remnants of Atlantis. Intricate sculptures thousands of years old depicting thinkers, philosophers, divine royalty and deities, were just a few of the artifacts unearthed. Hopefully, future research will prove Acholonu and others like her to be right.

Onishe: I am Onishe. I am here, Onishe the great, mighty, mother. I am here to speak in you, through me in you, for I am you. Now let's start with Africa's Golden Age.

You see the golden age in Africa was a pristine period, the first world, the world before the deluge or so they say. It was a world so free, so full of life, where people did commerce. People lived their lives and bargained and loved and had sex and made mistakes. There was great laughter and great prosperity in that world. A sense that all was possible, anything was possible. There was music in the air (metaphorically). There was great music (literally), great artistic achievements. That is the golden age my darling, an age of love and laughter and possibility. It was real, this age. People loved for they had little to fear. People enjoyed their work and their talents and enjoyed rendering their services to others. Thus, there was healthy competition, great innovations, great skills, great artwork. Greatness was the theme of this age.

Atlantis was a land with plenty of blue, crystal waters and beautiful, brilliant fish. A land with sorcerers and witches and geniuses... lots of experts in their fields. Mind reading was already being developed in Atlantis as well as levitation. Food was harvested in healthy environments. There was plenty of food, so much that hunger in general was quite rare. Their scientists combined spiritual knowledge with scientific technology.

All was wonderful until it began to only seem wonderful. Laughter, music, abundance, merriment, until they fell, became proud, began to feel disunited... until they got careless, took for granted their gifts, their accomplishments, and began to be pompous. They continued on for a while, pretending all was good, all was well. All seemed good for a long time for the breakdown was systematic. Then it came upon them spiritually, you know, on the emotional and mental plane before descending on them physically... the devastation, the destruction, one after another, leading to an ultimate destruction and end, which then lead to a new beginning, a new era and a new civilization, as you would say.

Spiritual Life In Atlantis

Life was great as I said, wonderful, almost too ideal... considering the state of our world today. Their temples were often decorated in purple and blue/indigo and their Priests were often draped in pristine white color. They took pride in their clothes. They had Eucharist but not with the type of bread we now have in the Catholic Church, but a special type of bread/meat... something quite unique to them. Their Priests wore slippers, fancy slippers in the sanctuary. They worshiped the goddess, the land goddess and sea too. They loved and adorned cowry shells. They often used the shells to communicate with underwater spirit realms. They developed technology constantly to connect with the spirit world, coming up with new and interesting ways to connect with spirit. Sometimes they got carried away, but their intent, at least initially, was good until pride set in once more.

The Fall of Atlantis

The destruction, the fall out... for they fell before nature around them “fell” with them... So it happened and things changed. Darkness took over, ignorance took over. Cultures attempted to pick up the pieces. People who survived attempted to preserve the past but soon the history is forgotten as generation after generation emerges.

Africa, the motherland, she dwindled, her light. Became a target of conspirators first in the spiritual realms and then in both the spiritual and the physical planes. She succumbed to her own weight and imploded from within. She became ball game for all kinds of forces for the breakdown within began to happen leaving her vulnerable. Same with the other “mother speaking” cultures. But with Africa, her suffering began from within, when the people began to feel a disconnection from their god and source of power. When they began seeking hope outside of themselves, looking outside for something, some force or whatever to aid with their day to day life. It was a collective thing, this event.

Africa still suffers for the same reasons. She is lost. She lost herself, lost her powers, her abilities, her force/strength. She lost it after the Golden Age. That is when her breakdown began...and continues till this day.

Africa must awaken to herself, her power, her “mojo.” Africans must awaken to who they are. They must raise mother again. They must wear her again, be her again. They must learn to love too, like the mother does... but love without taking on abuse, a balanced love. A love that does not tolerate evil. She will prevail.

Lemuria

Lemuria and Atlantis were one and the same civilization. Same people inhabited both. Same people, but under different circumstances and time periods. Lemuria was/is the motherland, the motherland of all “mother speaking” cultures. Atlanteans however, were a mixed race of people. Every one (race) was there, as it is in the world today.

The Sirius Star

Much has been written about Sirius and what it means to the inhabitants of earth therefore I will only provide a brief synopsis of the star system here.

Dubbed the sun's sun, Sirius is located in the constellation Canis Major. Sirius can be seen from almost every inhabited region of the Earth. Sirius is a large binary star system, consisting of a bright star known as Sirius A, and a faint white dwarf companion named Sirius B. The Dogon, a tribe in Mali, and many other indigenous societies, claim that a group of fish like beings (referred to as the Nommo by the Dogon) came from the stars and initiated their civilization. Scientists have long believed that life began in the oceans. And even a baby is created by the mating of the fish like essence of a man's sperm and woman's egg in the watery womb of the mother. When you observe the constellation of Sirius (I recently caught the constellation of Orion in the night sky) one feels like they are indeed being watched. And yes, in fact, we are. We have big brothers and sisters, what we refer to as divine ancestors and at times gods, presiding over the earth, watching and guiding our affairs. The ancient Egyptians used to call them, the guardians of the sky. The representative god man, ancient Egyptian/Khemetic god Osiris or Ausar/W'sir and his partner, Isis or Auset, (Osiris and Isis are Greek derivatives) are said to reside in the Sirius star with Orion being Osiris's main anchor.

The Real Africa In A Realm In Space According To Osiris (New Year's Eve Meditation 2010)

The music of Isis is playing in the background when I encounter what looks like the dark cosmic waters, then numerous stars imprinted over darkness. An Angel appears and leads me to a golden pyramid structure. Then I see Osiris/Ausar. I am Isis his female counterpart/half. We face each other. He is almost as dark as the dark cosmos around him. Blue light emanates from his eyes and penetrates/reaches mine. Then he hands me a mini pyramid (looked like a quartz crystal) which I receive with both palms facing up. I ask him for knowledge (I wish to free my people). He shows me a pyramid, golden, in the distance behind him. He says the real Africa resides in a realm of light that no one can disrupt from within or without. He spoke of black people being the sons, the first begotten, the “favored.” He spoke of stars, spoke of us emanating from stars. He spoke of Africa and says her essence is the pyramid. Ausar (in some parts of Igboland, Asa), Atlantis, Africa, Ani... he said think of them in those terms (letter A has pyramid shape). He spoke in symbols. He showed me the free mason symbol (with the mathematical instruments) as the meditation pose signifying illumination. A few days later, I discovered that a human figure in meditation pose was an old free mason symbol from the ancient mystery school of Osiris, from the ancient mystery schools of Africa. Africa must reclaim her lost knowledge. It was in fact after this experience that the idea for this book was cemented. It is important to note here that Osiris ruled Nubia during a time when Africa was more united than she is now. He was a Priest king or what the Igbo people will call Eze/Nze/Nshi. Back then Nubia encompassed various lands across the African continent. Our ancestors from different clans and tribes knew of this divine ruler who ruled over a (their) great African nation. Osiris has also revealed to me that it is for this reason that he also represents African unity in this very moment.

Sirius Star/the True Africa II (New year's Eve Meditation 2010)

Osiris appears before me then merges with me. He is black and dressed in Pharaoh Regalia with a gold band on his arm. I see starry stars imprinted in darkness. I am in Sirius. I see/recognize Anubis/Sebek. He seems to be guarding the place or acting as a gateway. I am confused over this but later learn that he is responsible for why Sirius is often tagged, the Dog Star. I see an elephant, then an Indian looking man, blue and powerful. He is riding the elephant. He rules this place it seems. He rules the place of the Lords of Fire. The god is beyond any names or titles I can think of such as Rama, Shiva, or even Krishna. He just IS. Then I am told the gods reside here. I see animals and they represent the divine animal totems or symbols of the gods. I am told they have their meetings in this realm. Then just below (the experience was like being in an elevator where I was being led down) is what looks like a vast, dry land. The soil or what seems like the soil is brownish and looks like a desert with hills. I see creatures, bluish and appearing crab like. I can only see the tops of their heads however and they are moving in procession towards a great fiery light. They are of one mind. There seems to be so much space, at least in the area I am shown. The space is due to the fact that things are not solid or densely arranged as on earth, I am told. I am led further down and see beautiful, bluish water. A powerful dark goddess emerges with thick locks, and she is rising from the waters in such a powerful way. She takes over me and for a few minutes I shake vigorously due to her share power and energy. She has the essence of a powerful snake dragon. I am led deeper into the water after she is finished with me. I see another goddess with an elaborate crown on her head. She looks Indian. She is smiling. I ask her about other goddesses, confused to find her alone. She tells me they are many and they are one. She says they are not into counting themselves. Then I am led even further below and see, to my surprise, the surface of the earth. I wonder the meaning of this. I am told that they are involved with the earth. I suspect the water realm forms as a passage way somehow.

Osiris: The iron smelts, it smelts, Osiris smelts the iron. And the day of purification, of alchemy, is here. A time of removing and distinguishing between the purified and the unpurified substance. Awakening isn't going to be easy for many people. A lot of pain due to attachment. Your worldview will collapse in exchange for a purer and truer worldview, a worldview more aligned with the spirit of the race of god men/women. Awaken, or else it will be too heavy to bear the earth's changes in terms of natural disasters, wars, climate changes and other bizarre events. It is only the beginning. A shift is occurring. A shift is now and we are turning the wheels, accelerating this process, making this happen.

The Realm of the Goddesses

As I face the mirror, she comes through, taking over me, opening my third eye. She says through me out loud, that the realm from which I seek is more than a water realm or even the Sirius star system. It is a realm that exists everywhere. She shows me a temple, my third eye serving as an entrance and I see snakes, standing at first, then humble, almost prostrating. And I see dragons, protective, powerful, loving dragons, and as I walk the checkered hallway, I see Queen Goddesses, women with crowns on their heads and flowing gowns. It is a realm of goddesses, a temple, a palace, and as I explore further, a city, an entire world...

On another day, more is revealed. Outside the temple, a pool of water, an area where mermaids reside. There is music here, beautiful, soothing music. The mermaids ooze music from their mere presence. There is innocent joy, the purest joy here. I detect one mermaid with long, lustrous red hair. Another, ebony, with long, thick, locks. Though they are of different colors, there is no race here, just rays. In this realm, I come to discover that there are libraries within the temple and training rooms for different aspects of the goddess. There is even a section that trains goddesses on the art of sacred sexuality and eroticism.

There is constant evolution, I learn. Fish essence leads to mermaid essence, which leads to goddess essence and so on, but there is fluidity in this process that cannot be explained by strict logic.

Nsibidi: Snake

On Nigeria

Nigeria is located in West Africa. This oil rich country has a population of about a 100 million people, making it the most populated black nation in the world. It is for this reason, and many others, that Nigeria plays an important role in the economic, mental and spiritual freedom of African people everywhere.

During the slave trade, millions of people were taken from Nigeria and neighboring countries such as Ghana, Senegal, Cameroon and Ivory Coast and forced to work as slaves in parts of Europe, the United States and the Caribbean. So it is a fact that many Africans in America, Europe and the Caribbean, who were descendants of slaves, have traced their ancestry back to Nigeria. In fact, Hollywood movie stars, Forrest Whittaker and Danny Glover, are just a few prominent people who have traced their roots to this country.

In 1960, after more than a century of colonial rule, Nigeria finally gained her independence bringing hope and inspiration to Africans all over the world. This event and similar events in Africa even inspired Civil Rights leaders like Malcolm X to pay homage to the motherland. Today, however, Nigeria, often regarded as the giant of Africa, has not lived up to its ideals. Government corruption and neo-colonialism has crippled the country over the years. Nigeria, blessed with natural resources and known for its oil exports, is sadly listed as one of the poorest nations on earth. The ancestors and gods expect more from this rich country with beautiful people and are saying now is the time for Nigeria to fulfill her destiny.

Osiris: Nigerians must stop the bloodshed, stop the killings, the ritual killings...

(The words are never fully completed. The gravity of what he is saying is however powerfully felt as indeed ritual killings and other forms of violence done to attract wealth have been on the increase in Nigeria and other parts of Africa).

Ikenga, Lord of the 3's: Look in the water. What do you see? [At this point I look into a bowl of water in front of me]. You see a creature, something strange forming some kind of spherical shape. Nigeria is moving around, eating herself, like a snake biting its tail. The snake biting its tail is what?

Messenger: Ouroboros, which is symbol of cyclical nature of things as well as transformation.

Ikenga, Lord of the 3's: The government is not African in principle. It is not the people's, and, therefore, her leaders are not for the people. Corruption is greed. It is lack mentality that creates corruption...Illusion of lack where abundance abounds. The leaders are empty in mind and spirit and feel the need to gauge themselves to an end that befits them.

Right Government For Nigeria

A government the people decide is right. A government that starts from local and state level that the people choose. Egalitarian with godly principles. So the only job of the national government is to monitor/oversee as a big brother of some sort, as a unity force of some sort, as an umbrella.

Nigeria, Can It Change For Better?

There's hope for the ancestors do wish for the most part for it to work. Nigeria has potential, has a destiny to fulfill, has potential for loving capacity to self and neighbors as well as to be a unifier, a source of knowledge, spirituality, resources, etc, to itself and its neighbors and even the world. So much good to be tapped with its resources and people, but people must change, people must awaken to their powerful nature and say no more and change things.

Osiris: Nigeria must self transcend, self realize to discover me, the god man so as to thrive and fulfill its potential. It hasn't even yet fulfilled its potential!

The Life of Ikenga, Symbol of Divine Masculine Force

Ikenga is one of the most celebrated deities in Igboland. Often associated with men, women, however, can claim Ikenga as their own. This god of success is associated with the number 3 and often introduces himself to me as The Lord of the 3's. He is an important force to connect with when aspiring to succeed in life.

Ikenga: I, Ikenga, was a mighty man of prestige. I lived in royalty. I was a man of great achievements. I, Ikenga... I am a warrior. I am the king. I am a royal one. I am a prince. I was a champion wrestler in Igboland but other lands heard of me. I was a warrior king. (Various female ancestors take over referring to themselves as the mothers):

Now Ikenga as ancestor represents more; represents unity with his Chi, a higher purpose, higher masculine principle of divine action. In that incarnation, he lived in the age of the sons of light and daughters of the light and the moon. An age when things were still new but not as fresh. This was before and after the fall of man.

There are many Ikengas and have been since. Ikenga was a deity. He descended with his ancestors from the sky. He fell when his ancestors fell. He climbed as his ancestors climbed. He was a deity descended from a line of god men in a faraway part of Igboland when the spirit and the land were one.

Ikenga was a royal ruler of his army of skilled warriors. They engaged in battles of mythical proportions, battles that lasted hundreds and sometimes thousands of years. Back then death was not as real as it is today. Ikengas incarnate from same source of spiritual lineage. There are incarnate Ikengas in all cultures and lands and they carry that warrior touch. Warrior is the trait in man/woman that fights till he or she accomplishes their goal. It is will power, drive, force—active masculine. Ikenga was handsome prince. He was handsome and regal and yes, the ladies sang of him. They did back then. They sang to heroes, to gods, to miraculous feats achieved back then. He lived in an era when the names of places were different but he first arrived in Igboland about 30,000-20,000 B.C. Then he moved around them, pitched tent for a while.

Ikenga: I am Lord of the 3's. Knowledge is your right hand. Power is your right hand and in your third eye and in your heart. I am the spirit of the lord of the 3's. I was in ancient Egypt, one of its founding fathers. Herukhuti is my name, protection and warrior deity.

Ikenga On the Nigerian/African Economy, On the Economic Standing of Black Americans/Black Caribbeans and On the Golden Age Economy.

Ikenga: Money, my daughter, is good. Is what makes a society function. Money is central to business, is central to the marketplace (which is sacred to the Igbo). Money as sacred is tool for righteousness, is tool for building God's kingdom on earth, Chukwu's abode on earth...which can only occur when your collective Chi's come together as a whole... which can only happen when each of you realize your Chi. Then god becomes man. All should strive for Ikenga. Men and women have the ability to strive for Ikenga. Ikenga is man's Chi, after all. Man's force or drive that leads to success, the type that can only lead to success. One's Ikenga must stand strong, be activated with prayers and offerings daily. One's Ikenga must serve them well.

Igbos, my sons and daughters, are Ikengas. They come from the divine force of action, of activity, of drive. There is no life without drive, without activation. I am central to life. I am a big component of life so Ikenga is important and vital to success, life and evolution.

The Marketplace

The marketplace is a haven to exercise this god gift of love and exchange of services and labors, exchange of products/goods brought about by labors. But it is really about the value of labor, the value of labor and productivity which makes for a healthy society, a productive society, which is what the Igbos figured out.

Nigerian Economy

Nigerian economy is a shame, a shame to ancestral values and visions of what a productive society is/should be. In Nigeria, honest productivity and pure labor is not rewarded, is not valued as the ancestors valued them in the past. Value labor, value hard work, from a place of love. Value your efforts, contributions and gifts to society then enjoy the success that comes with it. That is the Igbo way, the god man way. Economics in Nigeria must be handled with respect, with value, by the government and its citizens. It is the trademark of any productive society. Ikenga comprises god service, god work, god values in the performance of such work. When a society has good Ikenga values it cannot fail. It will only expand and grow. The economy in Nigeria will change, but the system must fail in people's minds, must crumble in people's worlds for people to say, enough is enough, for people to be forced to be ingenious, to be creative and imaginative. All this is Ikenga!

Creativity, imagination, the belief in what is possible and not focusing on the impossible. Love. Love for nation, for self, for future generations, must motivate economy, must motivate people enough to do what it takes to break the false system of scarcity, of lack, of "playing it safe."

Government is the people. When will people realize this? People sustain and feed their governments, good or bad, with their thoughts, their complaints, their prayers, their "helplessness," "their victim mentality." Nigerians must stop being lazy of mind.

It applies to all of Africa as well, even though with Nigeria it is highly important because of her impact, her influence in the world.

Africans in America need to build Ikenga shrines in their homes and hearts. They need to build shrines even at churches and temples. They are industrious in their blood but must acquire creativity just as their siblings in the motherland [must do the same]. They must learn to be ingenious, imaginative, creative, business minded. They must learn to be self sufficient and not seek help from outside for it will never come in the way they want or deserve it. But help must come from within, if activated. So yes, it applies to Africans everywhere. Self sufficiency meaning creativity, ingenuity and trusting that the earth has enough for everyone, but will only bless those give to life. Give to receive is not only a church tithing philosophy. It is the law of life. Give to receive. Your talents, your gifts. Give with love, with gratitude and the doors of abundance will open before you. Ikenga speaks!

Golden Age Economy

This will be brought about by collective change, collective growth, collective imagination and vision. Golden Age is what? Is it gold? (A joke). Golden Age is now. Only now. Now is all that is. Don't wait for a Golden Age. Be the Golden Age... 😊

The Mother On the State of African Spirituality and On Slavery

Onishe: I am water. I am waves of love and mercy. I am all the goddesses combined for there is only one god/dess and she is here in you and in all. The illusion of a separation is the lie the deceivers do not want you to see. And we know them by their fruits for they are everywhere, in all religious and so called spiritual practices all over the world.

Connect to me sons and daughters of the light. You are people of the sun, the brilliant light, for that is your essence, the stars. You are meant to represent stars, the brilliance of the creator as sun people. You are meant to reflect light. But you fall and stumble and crawl because you have misused and distorted your light, the light of the mother which reflects all around the universe. You abuse this light with bad juju, bad witchcraft ...some of you, if not many, are afraid. Many of you are in constant fear of someone or something doing bad juju on you. How unfortunate this it, for a continent entrusted with so much light, so much good in the forms of spiritual and earthly riches! Isn't this the dream of every person, man, woman, every nation, continent and civilization? YES it is. Now ponder this, how you have failed over time. How you have let yourself be deceived by the false teachings of the evil ones. How you have let your spiritual arts, the brilliance of it be misused and abused. How many of you are now fleeing from this very power that was meant to be used to uplift and create for yourselves and the entire world.

I am you my daughters and sons. I am your mother. I am all the goddesses of whatever villages or tribes or nations or continents you come from combined. My different aspects are just me sending different portions of myself to different lands, but do not be mistaken that I am only here for certain people or certain cultures or religions. Remember, there is only one omnipresent mother.

I am one mother, mother to all races. I am mother to all. Mother's children enslaved one another, one race against the other. Yet it was initially blacks on blacks, whites on whites, in different cultures, under different guises.

What you do in your home will attract more of it to your home.

Slavery was bad. When you treat a son and daughter of God as an object it can never be right.

Africans are sons and daughters of light. Even though currently miss-users of this light in many ways, we are hoping that through this current awakening that this changes over time. That the so called dark continent becomes the light continent with its candle ever lit, ever burning, to the fascination of the world as in ages past. When this happens though (the ancestors hope sooner rather than later) make certain to uphold the light of the mother in such a way that you are not vulnerable to misuse from within and without as has been the case in history.

Slavery was an event of tragic proportions even for the ancestors. Pray for the ones who suffered in essence to get you were you are in terms of an age where we are all more connected than ever leading to more possibilities for technological and educational and even spiritual advancement.

Indeed send these souls love till this day, for even though some if not many have incarnated over and over since then, some of them, some of you, still carry the painful memory deep in your soul and this is not good for the overall welfare of the psyche. Prayers of love, of offerings, of acknowledgement, of peace, should be sent to them daily in your prayers. Ask them for forgiveness if you feel that in any way either in a past life or perhaps in the hands of your ancestors, they suffered thus. They will willingly forgive for a good number of them have already ascended and moved on to realms of light.

Slavery was in many ways a case of one brother being 'jealous' of the other to the point of coming up with reasons, however so illogical, to rape, kill, and subdue them in the name of resources (material and human) and land.

The imbalance caused by slavery will be balanced again.

The Sun, the Light of the World

Sirius is associated with the spirit of wisdom and the moving of one consciousness to another. However, it is also symbolic of the cosmic light that permeates through existence. Recall that the Bible says that the first thing God created was light. Scientists also agree that light was there from the beginning. We exist and thrive from light, the light of the sun as well as the spiritual light which the sun has come to symbolize. Which is why it isn't surprising that the ancients paid homage to the sun and its greater companion, the Sirius Star.

The sun influences our weather patterns and the behavior of all life on earth. Even the Sirius Star was known to influence the anticipated flooding of the Nile River in ancient Egypt and there are astrologers who claim Sirius also influences our behaviors just as certain phases of the moon are known to influence the psychic and psychological behaviors of human beings. The cosmic light has incarnated in many cultures under many names, Heru of Ancient Egypt, Jesus Christ of Ancient Israel, Krishna of Ancient India and so on. He has incarnated among smaller indigenous cultures under different names, genders and titles. In fact, we are all meant to represent the cosmic light or the Christ/Kristi, the light of the world since we are all made of light. What the previously mentioned figures have done throughout history is to show us the way by reminding us of who we are and our purpose.

Anyanwu: I am solar god, sun king. I am the light of Sirius, the central sun, the central star system of your planet. There is only one light, one Anyanwu, one source of all things. My symbol is the physical sun, but I represent much more than the physical

sun. I represent the spiritual sun. Physical manifestations are only symbols of cosmic principles and realities. I am the sun. Righteousness. Symbol of righteousness. I also represent love, light, truth. Nothing is hidden from the sun as this messenger is learning for her subconscious conflict on race is being shown glaringly. A black woman, an African woman, she has come to represent when she in fact represents much more! So my light, the more she works with it, shows her hang-ups, her racial identity struggles, her issues with race created by the injustice her people have suffered for centuries by others. These issues she struggles with lie indeed in many of you, if not most of you all and in fact most likely all of you all residing in the material plane. The light hides nothing... ☺

On Benevolence

What did Krishna represent? [Was listening to Krishna chants earlier which led to me channeling the god later in the book] Wealth, abundance, joy, music, but also truth. I bestow a feeling of goodness and joy. That is benevolence. When you are going through winter months metaphorically and even on the physical plane and suddenly there is a burst of sunlight, signaling hope, that is benevolence. People take the physical sun for granted, forgetting that everything in nature speaks, including the sun. The sun is a living, breathing entity-a force. In its intense form, it appears harsh and unforgiving. But in its gentlest form, it is a loving father, radiating goodness, warmth, light, to people, plants, animals and elementals below. The sun gives of itself but is often taken for granted. Without the sun there is darkness, there is fear. Without the sun, there is a feeling of despair, of the end, of cessation. The sun is life giving which is why the ancients venerated the sun (In Ancient Egypt as Ra), and the Igbo people venerated me as Anyanwu or Eze Anyanwu. Now the veneration of the sun is diminished in many parts of the continent and world where indigenous practice was strong and is now as a symbol of Christ in the form of Jesus Christ and Sunday, which is indeed a very limiting way of looking at the sun, of venerating and honoring and having reverence for the sun and indeed all life for the sun represents life.

On the Second Coming

I am the second coming. The physical activity of the sun in the coming years shall prove that I am already here. The Christ, Kristos, Kristi, Chi, is already making her appearance. She will rise, the Christ. I use “she” so that you can program your mind to recognize the female Christs among you. The Golden Age concept is in a sense my arrival, the arrival of all that the sun represents. A time of great opportunity, of great growth, of great expansion. A time and period of finally manifesting heaven on earth, which is what many of you, including the ancients and ancestors, have prayed for and continue to pray for, yet why are many of you afraid? It is because the light shows your secrets, your buried issues, fears, insecurities, judgments, struggles, etc. There is no hiding beneath falsity, beneath masks of “goodness.” No hiding. But those who let go and surrender all hidden fears and darkness to the light to consume after it has been exposed will transcend. They will experience and know and understand the father’s unconditional love. There are those who are afraid to change, to transform in these times for it will mean letting go of pleasurable habits and acknowledging their weaknesses. But God is love. How can you know this without allowing yourself to test and prove it for yourself by surrendering your life, your habits, to him?

On Gold.

Gold is very pure, very high frequency which is why it is hidden, suppressed by the evil power structures currently in place [Anyanwu insists that their time is coming to an end as the Christ returns in fuller capacity and radiance]. Gold is symbol of abundance, is symbol of true riches. Emphasize the word, true, and meditate on it. Gold is power, is wisdom, is divine masculine because of its potential intensity. But of course, women too can wear gold in their auras for gender in spirit realms is different from your views on gender which is often based on duality and black and white thinking. So it makes sense, the golden age, heh? ☺ It makes sense, the term. But consciousness must bring about it or the coming light, the coming abundance of truth and purity will prove too intense for people to bear.

There are still many of you who believe that you don't deserve abundance and internal freedom. There are still many of you that have slave mentality, that still think that they must receive bread from the government or whatever structure might be to "eat" and to function. That creative abundance is only for a select and lucky few, which is indeed what many powerful people do wish for you to believe. The secret is exposed. WEALTH IS FOR EVERYONE AND IN EVERYONE AND HAS NEVER NOT BEEN THE CASE, EVER! The book, The Secret, (By Rhonda Byne) did its part to show this, though imperfectly (the consciousness of the messenger was part of the problem).

The illusions of lack, of scarce, of handouts, will be forced to be dealt with. It will take and is indeed taking many of you losing your jobs and your financial security and hitting rock bottom to see and ask the question, is this life? And those who refuse to see and ask this question will keep suffering, sadly, while those who meditate and say, wait a minute... I shall choose to not let my bank account define abundance for me, nor whether I have a job and so on for abundance is all around me, in the expansive sky and giving trees, in the sacred ground, in the air I breath, in the life that is all around me, the consciousness permeating all existence, in the central sun of my being and the universe. At that point, all sense of struggle falls away and a new journey of inner wisdom and riches begins to reveal itself, eventually. If you are patient enough, it will manifest physically in the form of good health, good friendships, family, resources, etc. Gratitude is very important in all things. All is truly well. ☺

Quick Method For Attracting Abundance (Morning and Night Ritual)

Start with gratitude prayer; praise songs to Chukwu, Ala, or whatever sacred being you honor as your life giver. Then when you start to feel really joyful and peaceful and radiant, spread it around by wishing the same feeling on others. Give to receive. Sun must shine. Light must spread for it to fully function. After that, then whatever you need, wish for it like a child knowing that the kingdom of God is within you. ☺

Quote from Anyanwu, “Greet the sun every morning, be the sun all day.”

Nsibidi: Sun

Osiris (Ele), Heru (Chi), On Christ/Chi Consciousness

Heru/Chi/Kristi: I Heru, the Christ, the Chi... I am he who has come over and over in many and in you to bring peace, to talk peace, and be peace and righteousness. But humans have been stubborn from ages past and have not heeded the Christ/Kristi among men, women and even children. Do you recognize the Christ among you? Do you recognize the ordinary people or seemingly ordinary people in service, contributing to this world, standing up for truth and justice (ofo na ogu), which is righteousness? Do you recognize them among you? You don't. Many of you don't, which is fine and not fine at the same time for many Christs have been killed without your realizing or knowing it. Many are persecuted even now, today, in your world, yet some of you, if not many, still await "the Christ" (in the form of Jesus Christ who is just one example of the Christ consciousness in embodiment). Who is the Christ? The SUN. What is the SUN? The light. The Christ is the light of the world and each of you have the potential to be the Christ because each of you came from the light, the spiritual sun, the burning bright stars. Heru/Chi/Kristi speaks in you and in all. He is constantly speaking so heed!

Osiris/Ele: I am Osiris (Igbo god, Ele). I am god man and also god woman. I am one genderless whole. I am also god child as well for children have the potential to be Christs. Don't neglect or ignore your children as is the case in Africa and the world. In Africa children have no rights. Children are treated like second class citizens, but to us, to me, they are citizens of God's (Chukwu's) kingdom having recently incarnated from there. When I say children, I mean as a collective for there are indeed children who are lost or have been made lost for several reasons.

Nsibidi: Moon

Osiris/Ele and Isis On Berlin Conference, Colonialism and Neo-Colonialism (History of Berlin Conference and the Consequence It Has Had On Africa Since).

Osiris/Ele: [In the time of the Berlin Conference] The Lords of Fire and other lords in the cosmic realm/identity (for there are other gods, other realms that join with us, that are one with us) held a meeting. The dark forces also held a meeting in their realm, a distant dark place. It exists, this realm of evil forces that plot against the children of the sun, the children of the cosmic light.

The participants of the conference could have been guided by us. At least we hoped so for we intended a world or an age where Africa would no longer be a world of itself but a part of a global identity.

We met, the dark lords met, the human beings met in the conference—which was just a product of behind the curtain events. We tried/ “competed” to influence the outcome of the breakup of Africa. We hoped it would at least be done with more wisdom, more influence from us. We hoped to influence these people even though they were not from the light. The dominant mentality on that table was exploitation and greed. You know the story, read your history... ☺ But they did not heed us, they chose to be led by the false lords. So yes, these meetings occurred simultaneously. It was a cosmic deal, an event of cosmic proportions. It was the signaling of a new age to come, an age for the potential growth of Africa.

Wars, instability and other worst case scenarios came to pass as a result. Africa with all its wars... Africa, the mothers weep for Africa. You have no idea how they weep, for the Mother as Africa has been collectively targeted, raped, mutilated, wounded...

Africa is undergoing cleansing. Pain and suffering is fire that burns, that hurts, that rids impurities. The Lords of Fire are over Africa, watching her and yet allowing the heat so to speak to consume her people until they are purified enough to say, enough is enough. In her highest emanation, Osiris/Ele is Africa.

The heat, the heat, we are releasing heat. We are releasing heat out of love. We are releasing light and when light burns, the darkness is uncomfortable and is revealed in hidden corners. And it is the light that some of you call heat, that some of you say it burns, because it is uncomfortable, because it shows who you are. And who you are (or have become in Africa's case) continues to show itself through wars, corruption and so on until you are tired and surrender and admit the darkness and release it so that the light can purify until the darkness is no more. The light reveals, then purifies, if you let it purify.

Isis On Behalf of the Mothers: I, the Mother, call me Isis. I represent all of them including Idemilli and Onishe my beloved sister. I am Isis, the first, the primordial. I, Isis, say Africa will be free if her children see to it or else she will shake and shake in her sorrow, her frustrations, her anger. We are watching. We

Water bearers. The Age of Aquarius. The age of water, of surrendering to the flow, of flowing with the mother, of loving her, moving with her, working with her. We are watching Africa, watching her attempting to flow, asking her children to please flow with her, with me, Isis. I am Isis, and I am your mother Africa. I am Isis, and we the mothers are watching. We divine mothers do not play into tribes, into groups. We, just as the Lords, wish for Africa to fulfill her divine role as a unified continent. Stop behaving like you are no longer one for you are and have always been and colonialism was an opportunity to step out of your little worlds of tribes and ethnic groups to identify as a unit, an African unit and then, ultimately, a global unit. The races, the continents, have their purpose. There is nothing hidden under the SUN. Nothing is by accident. Even with your free will, we are big brothers and sisters watching, influencing in ways we can.

Eke: The Supreme Mother, who dwells in the cosmic ocean awaits your return.

Osiris(Ele) speaks!

Heru (Chi, divine son/daughter of Chukwu) speaks!

Isis(representing the mothers) speaks!

Onishe On African Liberation

It is a fact that African people all over the world have suffered discrimination and human rights abuses for centuries to the point that as a group of people, we carry deep wounds and suffer from inferiority complex. Yet, why is that the case? Why are we often stripped of our dignity and culture? Why is it that even on the Motherland, we can't seem to progress even with all the resources that are buried in the soil? Why is it that it is taking us a while to listen to the voices of Ancestors such as Marcus Garvey, Malcom X, Martin Luther King, Bob Marley, Nnamdi Azikiwe, Thomas Sankara and many others who fought so that we could be a self determined people worthy of dignity and respect? Civilization began in Africa. And in the ancient past, we built great kingdoms and societies that marveled the world. How do we gain back our ancient wisdom, our pride, our dignity, and how do we go about fulfilling our destiny?

Onishe: Mother Africa, also aspect of Ani, is free. She is free and will keep being free. Ani will never allow herself be completely destroyed by human beings. She will destroy before letting anyone destroy her. So Ani Africa as an entity is free.

Now, Ani's children will be free but in one of two ways. On their own, initiating it with their free will choices in a collective way that fosters spiritual and economic growth or forcefully when the worst of the worst and some "innocents" are removed by sheer force during the great purification which takes time, a period of time within a cycle that is already here and has already begun.

Role of Women

African women have to stand up and represent Ani Africa. They need to stand up against rape and other abuses against women on the land. This abuse is reflective and reflected on the abuse of the land and hatred of the feminine where women are often faulted for all the problems of the world. Women, in particular, African women must stand up against abuse and the abuse of Ani Africa. They must empower themselves economically, they must claim equality with men for I, Isis, is equal to and claim authority as equal to Osiris/Isis my other half. African women must let go of the idea they need to submit to a man and instead submit to their higher selves, their god selves, their Chis and ultimately, Chukwu.

African women must be matriarchs in their homes; powerful, confident and nurturing... helping to raise god men and women. They must be warriors in the spiritual sense. Oh, women have great responsibilities indeed! If enough women awaken to their divine powers, their inner magic and resolve, their divinity, Africa shall dance!!

How To Go About This

We are spiritual. African women. Africa is the most spiritual continent in terms of mastery of mind/body dynamics, spiritual abilities and an “easy” connection to the land and cosmos. So there are different ways to do this. I (we) trust that they shall come up with ways by listening to our directions, by using the systems that already exist whether it be earth based [like Odinani] or sky based in terms of Christianity and Islam.

Prayers, songs, chants, drumming, dance, rituals, trance...aren't these all feminine elements? Activities women engage in with ease even without trying to at times? So when you throw in strong resolve, pure intent and divine love, what results do you think you will get? What benefits in terms of home and family and community and so on will be the result?

Nsibidi: Eke/ Creator Mother Goddess

Ani, Mother Earth, On The Current Earth Consciousness and On Natural Disasters.

Higher Self: What are our ancestors teaching us about our land, about the earth? What do Native Americans, past and present, have to teach us about the earth? What do, in fact, all indigenous people have to teach us? We are children of nature. There is nothing to fear. We are children of the land. Nature is a haven, a place of comfort, of growth and expansion if we allow it to be so for us. Nature is us and we are her. We are one with everything around us. The sky belongs to us, it is free for all to enjoy and benefit from. Who possesses the sky? No one. The idea itself seems foolish but somehow we think it okay to possess land and other aspects of life, a habit that began a long time ago. The sky is infinite. The sand cannot be counted. Trees are plentiful if we allow them to be just as we humans must be. It is all free. The illusion is that there is a price tag for wealth in its intrinsic form which is not true.

Ani: You all are children of the Mother goddess and like any functional mother, my love is free and without conditions. But how can I love, be myself, be nurturing and life giving, when you seek to destroy me? The ancestors, the elders, the wise ones...they see, they see the damage, the wound that is so deep and that is being slashed across my body, my being. The chiefs and elders of this land of America mourn and decry the BP oil spills and various environmental catastrophes that have been enacted on this land and around the world, for aren't we all connected? Black or white, red or blue or yellow? Aren't we all breathing the same air? This same life, aren't we all engaged and plugged into?

Listen to mother.

The problem is many of you have stopped listening and perceiving. You are too distracted by television, by technology, by unnecessary busyness. But can you function, use technology, without me? No! So why not take time for me, for yourselves? Why not take time to smell the fresh air, feel the cool breeze, run water on yourselves and marvel? Why not take time to gaze at the sun in its glory as it rises and sets? The moon in all her wondrous phases? All these created just for you to behold, to enjoy, to connect with. Beauty could have been a non-reality if the creator willed it to be so, or he would have kept it all for himself, but no, he let beauty follow you everywhere, permeate through everyone and everything.

Oh, perceive the beauty all around. Perceive it, enjoy it. It is part and parcel of God's kingdom, this kingdom that is often talked about in religious circles. The kingdom is here and now. It is all inside and around you. It is not in the sky or some secret location. It is here and now. Eden is here and now, but only those with perception, with clarity, with purity, see Eden, live Eden, experience her.

On Natural Disasters

When you learn to take in the beauty and magnificence and nurturing aspect of nature, you will realize that natural disasters are not in alignment with earth's highest purpose. Natural disasters suggests/is breakdown, collapse, damage...

[Her tone changes suddenly]

...She (the earth) will shift and shift. She will shift because she hurts. She will be forceful and angry because she hurts. It is that simple and the ancients knew this, which is why they venerated me, which is why they honored me and did not dare think that I ought to honor them as many people who are misplaced currently think. These people think I ought to serve their needs like a maid and so they take without reverence. I will shake for I am god/dess. I am a living, breathing, entity that cannot be destroyed and will not be destroyed by man. They ancients knew/understood that I will destroy man before man destroys me. Does this frighten you? Then good, awaken then! Realize and know that the earth goddess, often thought of in many new age and pagan circles (and many other circles) as being this soft, gentle, force/entity that needs to be "taken care of" as a baby or a child is false. For even though I am soft and gentle and sweet as many of you can observe within and around you in nature, I am also wild and free and expansive. After all, the dove and the lion both dwell within my belly. The evil and the good as well. Oh, I am a lot tougher and powerful than some of you know. It is only during natural disasters that some of you realize it and go, oh wow, this nature is terrible. But it is you who are terrible for I only reflect what you throw at me through your collective consciousness. The greed, the exploitation, the evils you commit against each other---all sins against me---return back, impersonally, to you. It is all energy and it is time you know this. It is taking too long for you humans to know this. Even animals, dear ones close to my being, know this.

So the ancients knew this about my nature, that I was giving and generous but could also get angry for the sake of balance. It is natural (the key word is nature) to defend one's self when being attacked. So when I respond to attacks made against me because of your ignorance and blindness, why am I cursed at or hated? Oh, many of you hate me, your mother, without realizing it. Many hate themselves and one another and I am represented in you all. Sigh.

The ancients performed cleansing rituals on the land whenever a perceived abomination was committed. They understood and still understand where they currently reside. Were they always perfect? No. Did they always carry things out appropriately? Of course not. But they got it much better than you do now. And these ancients, you must understand and know, want you to learn the lessons from their mistakes and to follow and to in fact, improve on their wisdom. Now is the time. No other. Now is the time.

I seal you in the sacredness of my symbol (the lozenge). Imagine it is as pure, white light that surrounds you. Imagine a spiral design in the heart of the lozenge with a dot at its very center. Imagine your self and the world as surrounded by this symbol, enabling my protection and your awakening. Ise! Ise! So shall it be, Ise!

*Ani ekwuru okwu!
Ani has spoken!*

Uli: Lozenge

Osiris and Isis, the Divine Pair, On their Relationship, the Current State of Male/Female Relationships and the Implementation of Sacred Unions.

As I meditate and connect with Isis, I have a vision of her. She appears in the form of Onishe and is walking on the river Niger. She is wearing a white dress as usual, and her kinky hair is arranged in a three part pony tail. As I continue to meditate and connect with her, pythons start to emerge from her. They emerge as her arms, her strands of hair, like famous ancient deity, Medusa. One glides from her stomach. She reminds me that she is a pythia goddess, an oracular deity in the following words:

“I am powerful snake lady, pythia, queen of oracles. I am God! I, Isis, I am queen of pythias, of snakes, of dragons. I stand by the river. I am the river. The river honors me. I am her. I gave birth to her as well as the waters. I am primordial. I am connected to all the others and all the others (deities) are connected to me. I am the goddess of creation, goddess of the fruit of the womb, the divine son of God. I am God too, can't you see? I am God too...”

Though the pythons have the potential to be terrifying, I choose to focus on the vision and not be moved as Isis continues to display her immense power. Then I ask her to narrate to me her relationship with Osiris. It is at that moment that she takes over me and transports me to a palace in ancient Egypt. I become her, sensual and powerful and graceful. She is wearing a gold colored gown resembling silk. She is in full Egyptian queen regalia. She is against the wall, her arms spread out, in a sensual pose. She calls out to Osiris...

...over and over until he emerges across from her/me. He is very dark skinned, almost as dark as the night. When he emerges in full pharaoh regalia, she hands him his staff, the symbol of his power. They then face each other, their mouths open, breathing mouth to mouth against each other in a sensuous interplay of love and affection. Then I start to hear her voice in my inner ear...

I am Isis, leaning against the wall. Osiris, my love, my friend...deeper than you will ever know, for he is my soul. I, Isis, I am here in my gold, flowing vest, in my pharaoh regalia. I am queen mother to all Egyptians. I am queen mother to all. Osiris and I are one. I, Isis, and Osiris, divine, cosmic, one egg of identity. We are one. We are male/female polarity in one-ness. We were incomplete in life apart. We were lovers to the core, but torn apart by circumstances, by evil. Evil is threatened by pure love, by divine love between a man and a woman. Evil is threatened by the power of cosmic relationships.

Osiris was taken from me. My love, it felt like a part of me was ripped off when this happened. It felt like I was missing. Cosmic love on earth between two people is madness or at least, appears that way. People don't understand it. People are threatened by it. I, Isis, even with my powers...and I was powerful even then, could not handle (it).

I brought Osiris to life. Truth is, I gave him life as the cosmic mother and the woman gives life to humanity. Osiris and I apart, I could not handle. Even with all my power, my magic, I could not handle (us apart) even for a second. So a part of me died when he was killed on the physical plane, and thus taken away from me.

Nature of their Relationship

Passion, sexual passion but on a spiritual plane. Divine. Again, in the earth plane, people could not get that, were threatened by it, this love, this force, this immense power it generated. That, my dear, is the power of sacred unions. Sacred unions between two evolved souls brings balance to the earth, makes angels sing, makes devils run. You have no idea! (laughter). Sacred unions create new worlds, new civilizations, births cities and golden empires and ages. Sacred unions create new eras, new cycles, new sets of timing... Sacred unions bring music and harmony and joy!

Sacred union is designed, in an ideal world, for all to experience. In fact, we all have sacred unions, in spirit, that is. In a place locked safely in spirit that we cannot reach easily as earthly beings except through a special type of tantric meditation where you, the beloved, decides to make conscious effort to connect with your secret flame, your other half, your divine pair. Truly, both of you are whole of yourselves. Wholeness is prerequisite for love. Wholeness is love for love is not and can never be fragmented or broken. It just is! So wholeness, a sense of one-ness within you and all life is love, is what Osiris in fact, stood for and stands for. Me as well!

Osiris and I were young so our love was too powerful for us at times. We couldn't harness it carefully. I mean, we did the best we could with it, but we could have harnessed it much better while on earth, for a greater good. We could have used more finesse and maturity in our combined expressions and outpouring of love. But we tried our best and the little time we had together, we made the most of it. We built a wonderful kingdom.

Harnessing love means to channel it for a greater purpose higher than yourself, that extends outside of you and in a way that does not allow you both to be consumed by the power of love for love is indeed a power. Sacred love between a man and a woman can move mountains and so on so you see why it is important for more of you to have sacred relationships? Acquire, sacred unions? You see why it is important? For if you had more divine relationships, I promise you the world for black people, African people, will be better. You will conquer just by this act of having multiple sacred relationships occurring. The light alone from this will remove darkness, remove sin, make hell tremble.

This form of relationship is understandably hard to attain...not with your egos, your fears, and so on in the way. You must transcend a certain part of yourself to attract that type of love, and you must already be operating on divine love within to attract more of it in a mate. No other way. No short cuts. Or else, if you do attract the person and you are still both operating on ego, you will fight, you will perhaps hate each other. You will have a miserable time together. You will eventually break up because the light, the intensity, of it will be too much for your egos to handle. Your ego tendencies will be magnified by the presence of this person and you know where that can likely lead.

Osiris and I did not have this problem. We loved so purely, so perfectly or at least as perfectly as we could. But we were not careful enough to tone down the intensity of our love around others. The ego is in opposition to love so you can guess how it rubbed people the wrong way! Let Osiris speak...

Osiris: I have been waiting patiently to speak now (laughs with Isis). Isis, my beloved, my true love. Without Isis, Osiris is only an incomplete story of the wonders of creation. I love Isis as I love me. She is me and I am her, which is why she is God too as I am God too.

Men must love their women to be holy, to be gods (laughs). Men must love their women to experience one-ness with the cosmic mother and with themselves. Men must love their women like their women were them, like they were one entity, one being, one force. As Isis has said very much already, the power of love is unmatched, the power of sacred unions. Men must protect, must defend... In ancient Egypt, I did not let any man come close to Isis to hurt her. I would have died before that happened and she would have done the same for me too (Smiles from both Osiris and Isis). So men must protect and defend and provide for their women. It is the loss of this that African women are being made vulnerable, and it is this vulnerability, their tendency to these days, carry so much without adequate support from their men that our current civilization is in decay.

Isis: Women must also love their men as I loved Osiris (Smile). Love is divine. It is a gift that no woman should deny herself. Don't be afraid to surrender to the flow of love, the flow of the cosmic mother for she is love. It is love that created the world, and it is love that will sustain your race and the world.

On Connecting To Divine Love

Osiris: Rise up to the challenge when it comes. In whatever shape it comes. Just rise up to the challenge. Make it a habit to choose love each time you are faced with a situation.

Isis: Connect to the source of all love to be love, to be an instrument of the ever loving Father/Mother principle.

Prayer and Love

Isis: Prayer, always (is effective). Prayer and meditation and also practice, as Osiris said.

Shortly after this dictation, Osiris and Isis began appearing to me as a pair and have expressed the desire to release more information about their lives in ancient Africa, and their vision for African people and the world. This will likely be the subject of the next book.

Ikenga On Balance and Economic Empowerment

Ikenga: I am divine spirit of protection, of metal. A spirit belonging to a realm of gods. I am the spirit of alchemy. I am the power of divine power, will and force. Many of us are here, wishing to speak, but I, Ikenga, I will speak as a representative. I am $I + I + I=III$, $1+2=3$. Unity and partnership. Positive and Neutral and Negative. Odd + Even+Odd. I am balance. The key to me is balance. My adherents strive for the middle path, the God path, the inner way. They strive for perfect balance between material and spiritual world. I belong to a realm of brilliant light where a group of us as cosmic beings reside as our home. We are radiant in all our dealings. We dwell in the realm of prosperity, of advancement, of success. Yes, there is a realm for such things as success and advancement from a highly spiritual place. We are the masters of the manifestations of wealth, of riches, of glory, of expansion. We desire for all humankind to be connected to us, to learn from us about attracting and making wealth. We are such beings, designed to bring wealth to those who will participate with us in this production of wealth for individuals and societies. We are individual and societal Ikengas as collective Ikenga can only occur when more individuals become Ikengas within themselves. We are a spiritual group of beings. We are connected to the sun and consider Anyanwu our father, our patron. We are beings that reside in an octave with mountains, homes and mansions and cities of light in this expansive realm of gods who bring wealth. Oh, we are many who reside here. We are many who dwell here. We are the original from which others (such as famed earthly city of Ife in Nigeria) were supposed to emulate. We are also warriors, some of us, carrying swords of victory wherever we go in whatever situations that comes. That is why Ikengas are victorious. They win. they don't give up or give in to life's pressures. They are not cowards. They conquer the material sphere as sons of God, of light...as rightful heirs to God's kingdom. Oh, they are not afraid of anything. They are warriors and they win.

African people have fought, have proven Ikenga tendencies in different situations; in slave revolts, in fights against imperialism in colonial times and now. But Africans must keep on. They have slacked economically. They gained a little freedom, which we helped sponsor when they called upon us in many ways. They got the freedom and gbom! they relaxed. They felt, "We have suffered enough. Now let's enjoy. Let's get government aid and so on." These thoughts persists in the subconscious minds of African people everywhere, this sense that the white man owes them something...

Wrong!! They owe you nothing. I repeat, they owe you nothing! (Laughs). Those having a hard time with this message may have to meditate on it; at least, I pray they do so before they dismiss the message and the messenger as "politically incorrect." Ikengas are proud, have dignity. African/Black man, where is your dignity? Ikengas fight and win. Black man where is the fight these days? You can't win if you don't fight, if you don't strive. Now is the time to push, to push hard. Now is the time.

They should connect to me, Lord of the 3's. They should connect to the spirit of divine mastery over the physical plane as they once did in the times of the ancients, in the time of Lemuria and other great empires. They should harvest goods and wealth by sowing seeds of hard work(not slave work) and determination. They should connect with me individually and collectively. They should not focus solely on getting away from earth to find safety in heaven, but must seek mastery in the physical plane.

I am Lord of the 3's. Lord of balance, of company. As you say, three is company (heartly smile), so build companies, hire each other, work together. Not everyone must lead, but all must be willing to contribute something for the advancement of the race. All must channel me in their work, in their communities and even in their families.

Ikenga is a force, an energy that resides within you all. Many truly successful entrepreneurs who are also spiritual, embody Ikenga without even a belief in a being named Ikenga or whatever other names I go by. Ikenga should be channeled best in the community where people come together and are determined to accomplish a goal. African people must come together and say, by so and so date, by this next stage in history, we will be in point Z and so on. It is not hard, for I know this messenger is thinking this is impossible, to unite millions of Black African people globally in this way, but I say, it is possible. Do you know there was a time African people dominated the earth? Ruled the land? Invented Agriculture and other advancements and systems of civilization with our help and the help of god men? Do you know they were of one mind...? How could they have accomplished that without unity? There is strength in unity. There is strength in numbers. There is victory in unison, in one-ness. So unite and stop making excuses! It is possible. You have done it before and will do it again. Or are you waiting for a major catastrophic event to occur before you do this? (Laughs and shakes head).

I laugh, but it is no laughing matter. The excuses must end. Really. We will dispense light to you. We are here. We have never gone away. We have always been there for you, but you forsook us and the wisdom of your ancestors. You forsook and continue to forsake our wisdom, our light, our messages and true messengers. You forsake yourselves, your knowledge, your roots and in doing so, your inheritance. Meditate on this for your inheritance lies in your roots. Know this. Wake up and stop blaming. Stop excusing... Ikengas don't do this (kai, tufia!). Ikengas don't do this. Your ancestors will be appalled. The ones who fought for your freedoms will be appalled. The ones who descended from our sphere to lead the way are appalled by your slowness, by your unwillingness to strive harder. And they were able to accomplish more even in situations that you are lucky to no longer experience.

Unite. Unite with the women who are your mothers for the earth, Ani, is your mother and women represent her, and it is impossible to successfully attain proper dominance of the earth with hatred of the mother lingering in your hearts. This is not how it is done. The ancients knew this. They knew better than to desecrate Ani, than to desecrate their women. They held Ani and women to a pedestal. That is the key to success...attaining balance/harmony with Ani and the female aspects of life and within yourselves. That is why in today's world, even with all the technology and advancements, the earth remains imbalanced. It is because the male energy has not formed a proper balance with the female energy that is life. True Ikengas know better.

Ikenga Rituals

We are with you and in you. We are not far, so call upon us. Simply do that. Simply call on us. The era of your gods being apart from you or your Chi and Chukwu being distant from you has to end and now.

Just call on us in sincerity. If you like, set up an altar with a white cloth with red dots on it. Set up a candle and a bowl of water and place kolanuts for your ancestors, to gain access to their favors and their swift attention and then pray from your heart. Meditate on me and what I represent.

My color is red and also whatever color that leads you to me, that activates me within you (smiles). Red is known for passion, for drive, so you can use red but not as an altar cloth. Balance is key. Use red candle and a white candle if you like. Balance is key. Some people cannot handle too much Ikenga. In fact, some people's problem is having too much of that forceful drive without the contracting balance that the mother brings. In all things, seek the wisdom of your Chi/divine self and seek earnestly the guidance of your ancestors. They...we... will help you.

It is sealed. It is done. We are receding now with blessings poured onto those who are receptive to the words of this message and the words of this book. So shall it be, Ise!

A Few Noteworthy Ancestral Figures of African Peoples (Experiences/What the Divine Spirit/Mmuo Nso Has To Say About Each Figure)

Mmuo Nso: Divine spirit is Holy Spirit, Mmuo Nso, who is a living, breathing entity and comforter as Christians have often described her. The Holy Spirit takes the form of the wind, of the element of air. As fire and earth and water each have their representative, I represent the wind or rather, the wind represents me.

Fela Kuti

Fela Anikulapo Kuti (1938-1997) was a Nigerian born Human Rights Activist and Musician who spoke against government corruption, imperialism and neo-colonialism through his unique sound known as Afrobeat. For his efforts, he was beaten mercilessly and imprisoned numerous times by the Nigerian government. Fela Kuti will go on to win the affections of millions of fans all over the world for his music and daring fight against oppression in his country. Controversy did not escape him however. Fela was known to live with numerous women, smoke marijuana publicly and openly denounce Christianity and Islam in favor of traditional practices. This, of course, offended many people.

Fela died in 1997 from complications due to AIDS. Millions attended his funeral in Lagos, Nigeria. Since his death, his music has garnered greater attention than when he was alive and his life is currently being showcased in the musical New York City Broadway hit, Fela!

Fela Kuti's Spirit

I know a few people who have felt his presence while listening to his music, one of them an African American priestess whom he appeared to while at an Afrobeat concert. Once he showed up unexpectedly to speak as I was channeling Onishe in front of an audience in Brooklyn, New York. It all started when someone shouted from the crowd, "How about Fela?" in a channeling session about African people. His sense of humor was still very much alive even in the spirit world. He teased me or rather the Onishe energy within me for calling him out as a chauvinist of some sort in front of the group. He is alive and well in the spirit world and is willing and eager to work with people for the advancement of African people. He revealed, several weeks later when I was alone, that he belongs to a realm of gods who incarnate to bring us back to the beginning, to the beauty, sensuality, wisdom and pride of our ancient past where "women were women" like his mother and "men were men" like his father. He also revealed that he wanted to bring God's kingdom on earth, and I got the sense that Kalakuta Republic, a commune he created in Lagos, Nigeria, and which was later burned down by soldiers, was perhaps an example of such an attempt. He is more than the Fela we are used to for he is now a spirit with a spiritual name. His light is also very much anchored in Nigeria. I get the strong sense that Fela is indeed very happy where he is. He is in a lighter place and continuing with his work where he is.

Martin Luther King

Martin Luther King, Jr., (1929-1968) was a prominent Civil Rights Activist in the United States. He was a Preacher as well and spoke against segregation laws that were in place during his time. He is well known for his articulate and heartfelt speeches, including, I have a Dream, that spelled out his vision of a country no longer divided by race, of a country where human beings are judged for the content of their hearts and not their skin color. He led numerous marches for Civil Rights and social justice for all. His denouncement of the Vietnam War upset the United States government and alienated him from some of his people who felt that it was not his responsibility to speak on issues going on in another continent when black people were still suffering in America. No stranger to death threats, he was eventually assassinated. Today Martin Luther King is one of the most celebrated Civil Rights Activists in the world because of his philosophy of non-violence.

Martin Luther King's Spirit

Mmuo Nso: Martin Luther King was a man of principle. Sacred and pure. Where he is now, he is known for his godliness and easy rapport and peaceful nature. He was indeed a peaceful soul, a rare breed indeed for the earth plane. In the elevated spirit realms, we enjoy his spirit, his energy, his drive. We enjoy his easy going manner and tendency not to be disagreeable because sometimes we spirit beings disagree about issues concerning earthlings, but he is always in the middle ground, always opting for the middle ground. Martin Luther King is communal and was communal on earth as well. He still strives for that in the spirit world.

Malcolm X

Malcolm X (1925-1965) was an Activist of what some might consider the militant kind. Jailed in his 20's for attempted robbery, he became an Activist after being exposed to the teachings of the Nation of Islam while in prison. Malcolm will go on to inspire black Americans through his speeches to love themselves. Unlike MLK, he did not subscribe to a non-violent revolution. Instead, he believed and encouraged black people to defend themselves against the aggressions of white people. Also, unlike, MLK, he did not support assimilation, instead he encouraged black people to form their own nation and build themselves up economically, independent of the white man. Due to internal problems within the Nation of Islam, Malcolm went on to leave the group and form his own. During this time as well, he had begun to soften his stance on white people. Initially, he believed, as he was thought by the Nation of Islam, that white people were "devils" and therefore, prone to evil. But after a trip to Mecca where he encountered people of all skin colors interacting peacefully, he realized that it was more so about consciousness than skin color. Unfortunately, he would be assassinated publicly in front of his wife and children before getting a chance to fully spread his new message.

Malcolm X's Spirit

Mmuo Nso: Malcolm X was a man of god, but in a strange way. He was a son, a divine son, from the cosmic light. He spoke truth directly like the Holy Spirit, and the like the sun whose nature is to expose everything, Malcolm exposed people's minds and hearts and intentions. He exposed the dominant thought form of his day.

Malcolm is loved very much by the beings of light who he was a part of and did his very best to represent on earth. He was a man of principle, a man of truth, a man, like the light, the sun. He is happy where he is. His voice can still be heard on the earth plane, including his philosophy but he wants people to know that he is a more highly evolved soul now than he was when on earth. He is continuing with his work and mission through people who are receptive to his words and also as a spirit undergoing enlightenment.

Funmilayo Kuti

Funmilayo Kuti (1900-1978) was a Feminist, the first woman to drive a car in her native country, Nigeria, and mother to Fela Anikulapo Kuti. These two were kindred souls and maintained a close bond throughout their lives. In her day, Funmilayo marched with a group of women to protest the taxation of women by the British during colonial rule. She was also known to befriend prominent Socialists like former Ghanaian President, Kwame Nkrumah. She was at her son's house in 1977 when Nigerian soldiers stormed in and burned down his home, and the republic, Kulakuta, which he founded. During this incident, she was thrown out the window, causing numerous fractures to her body. She would die a few months later due to complications from the incident.

Funmilayo Kuti's Spirit

During that same channeling session in Brooklyn when Fela came through, this goddess of rain, Funmilayo, appeared as well. She was dressed in white. She said she was very much in Africa and wishes to work with African people all over the world. She said she liked the Broadway show that premiered in New York City and made a joke about wishing her voice was as good as the actress who portrayed her in the play. I got the sense she really wishes to work with African women in particular.

Olaudo Equiano

Olaudah Equiano (1745 -1797) also known as Gustavus Vassa, was one of the most prominent Africans involved in the British movement towards the abolition of slavery. His autobiography depicted the horrors of slavery and helped influence British lawmakers to abolish the slave trade. According to his own account, Olaudah Equiano was born in the Igbo region of Nigeria in 1745. At the age of eleven, he was kidnapped with a younger sister by kinsmen and forced into Domestic Slavery in another native village. Soon after, he was sold to Europeans. Despite his enslavement as a young man, he purchased his freedom and worked as an author, merchant and world explorer.

Olaudah Equiano's Spirit

Mmuo Nso: Olaudo suffered. As an Igbo man he took it deeply to be enslaved. It was a deep wound to his psyche. It was a very deep wound which he later used as motivation to write about his life and to seek the abolishment of slavery. He is content where he is. He is helping other victims of the slave trade to heal and currently assists people with deep rooted past life slavery wounds in their healing processes as well.

A Few Channeled Messages From Other African/Indigenous Deities That Came Through In Trance and Meditative States.

Krishna On His Connection To all African People.

Krishna: Krishna is god of all. Krishna is here, is you. Krishna can identify with black people. Krishna is black cosmos. Krishna is black space out of which creation springs from just as black people have been the starting point of civilization from the beginning. I, Lord Krishna, I was in Lemuria. I was in Atlantis. I am the beginning. I am in all of you, all black people whether you choose to recognize this or not. Krishna can serve to bring all black people and all humanity together, for I am Christ. I am (what the Igbo people call) Nshi. I am a god man according to ancient Igbo tradition. I am the spirit of Kristos, Kristi, Christ, Chi... everyone. Recognize signs, recognize symbols, connect the dots. Don't let politics and racial issues get in the way of your source, your light, your power. Connect to me, the power of blue, the potency of blue. Blue is divine color, the color of divine men and women. Blue is the color of the cosmic mother as well. I am blue, I am (the spirit) of Lemuria as Lemuria was known for blue. Blue is (the spirit) of Atlantis as well as the color of the sky, of water and of heaven. ☺

Krishna sends peace. I come in peace to speak through this messenger who has not been too open to channel me to African people because I am now regulated to an Indian god or the blacks of India. But I am very much in her and in everyone. I am in you all, in all races. Those who seek Krishna shall find Krishna.

Krishna dances, dance with Krishna. Krishna laughs, laugh with Krishna. Krishna spins, spin with Krishna. Krishna will reach you if you seek him. I, Krishna, Nshi god, god of god men just as Osiris and all the other black god men... ancient of gods from Sirius...blue stars... blue planet... blueprint of your universe. Krishna raises palm against chest as sign of peace.

Tehuti, Ancient Egyptian god of Wisdom, On sound and Magic.

Tehuti: Magic is the essence of creation. In magic, you use the elements. So imagine the elements infused with spirit leads to manifestation. Magic is illusion. All is illusion. The creator dreams/imagines---is consciousness, the consciousness even in an atom. Your everyday life is nothing but imprint of source mind to create forms that appear and then disappear and is created again and so on. It is illusion. The material world is not real. It is one of the greatest illusions. It is magic. You are magicians just as the source because you came from the source. Forms, I master them. I know how to create something out of nothing. You all can too and in fact do so every day. You bring forth sound (eg music) out of nothing; you bring forth ideas out of nothing, etc. Magic is all around. It is you, creation, just creating. It is the essence in you and all life just being itself. All life, even the gods, come from "conscious nothingness." Nothing is unconscious because consciousness permeates everything even a grain of sand, even your pen, even in the smallest particle. The atom has sub atoms. Does it ever end? No.

*Indigenous people of the world are trained sound makers and magic producers. Magic and sound go together. The elements respond to sound for it is the essence of who and what they are. So the appropriate sound will induce the appropriate response in the element you are working with... fire, air, etc. So yes, the elements have their sound. Sound technology is being researched by scientists. And in the future, everyone, not just initiates, will hear the beat (think of heartbeat as well), sound and the music within each cell, within all forms of life (even a stone) and creation. Indigenous people who I have taught and inspired to jumpstart civilization after civilization [see Catherine Acholonu's book, The Lost Testament for more details], arising from the ancients, being close to the land and not being bombarded with technology, perceive the tempo that permeates through life more easily and are able to rhyme with it, flow with it, to create more variations of sounds. Being perceptive of their oneness with the elements enables greater understanding of the magic nature and essence of creation/manifestation. Sound technology was used to levitate objects in ancient times and even today by those who know.*

Several Indigenous Ancestors On Connecting With Them To Receive Knowledge and Strength Going Forward (Includes A Vision of A Black Civilization In Space)

In deep trance, I find myself in the galaxy, transported there. There are numerous stars shining through the darkness. Various gods begin to appear, seated in lotus position; Buddha in the form of a golden statue, Krishna, Quan Yin and Ganesh. Each of them, as they change form, first turn into a pink lotus before emerging as another deity. To my far left is the Milky Way. To the left of the Milky Way, a realm appears before me. I see a very dark skinned man, toned and regal. He is wearing a white cloth around his waist. The cloth is several inches away from his knee. He is holding a white shiny rod. Behind him, in the horizon, are pyramids spread out. Another pyramid is to his left. This pyramid has a circular light at its tip, like a torch. I notice a spiral shaped lake as well with pristine bluish water in the midst of this beautiful looking desert. I also see blue humanoid beings roaming about.

Outside of this realm, in the blackness of space, American Indian elders and other ancient American elders (reminded me of the Aztecs) emerge. Through their presence, I know and understand that the divine spirits and ancestors are watching over us. They are very much present and around. In the realm of blue people, I witness a strange sight for a few moments. I witness what appear to be nuclear explosions going off in the land. I am not sure if this is a past event or simply a warning of what could happen to our planet.

I wish to hear what the dark skinned man with the shiny rod has to say so I urge him to speak. He introduces himself. The name he gives me cannot be completely spelled out with a keyboard. The first two letters are however, B and R and the last letter is a triangle with the bottom part missing. In telepathic language he says:

“We hold the torch for ancient city Lem (Lemuria). We hold the torch for the mother city, the mother light in this galaxy. We are the guardians of the cosmic flame of love, peace and divine righteousness. We are divine blackness and righteousness. Black power in its supreme, powerful, esoteric and yet basic sense. Black at its height in the spiritual sense. We are holding the flame. Yes, we are holding the torch for you all to aspire to, to reach for one day, hopefully soon. We are masters of the race. We are divine men and women. We are the race of blue warriors and blue kings.”

When I ask him what I and others can do to contribute to our development he says:

“Love and service (is answer) for you and all men and women to lift this planet up. No other way! Love and serve and we will dispense power and might and true courage to you. We know you (African people) have suffered greatly, and we see it but you will rise as the sun. You will rise.”

My attention is then led to the indigenous elders who are still around, gazing at me (and earth below) through space. They speak with one mind.

“The elders are here. The indigenous ones are here, watching over the planet, the evolution of species. They are here. Watching and guiding those who hear us. We administer light and justice as you call upon us. But you must call upon us to hear you. You must call upon us for us to hear your voice. We are here, don’t forget this. Awaken and love. Serve each other. Bring back light into this world through prayers, love and service and by connecting and reaching out to the land, the cosmic sea in all existence, the divine Nut [ancient Egyptian name for Supreme Mother goddess], essence of creation. She is there in all things. In the ancients, she is there. Reach to the ancients, the wise ones, for strength, for the knowledge to transcend and to unlock the potential of the future and the mysteries of your souls.”

Feeling like it is time to end the session and still wondering about the nuclear explosions I noticed earlier, I ask the American Indian elder who identified himself as Chief Elder Makmi what is in our future. He says:

“Wise one say, future is now. Future is you. Future is you all.”

Spiritual Life

With regards to spiritual life, whichever deity you are naturally drawn to, do everything to get to know about them. Read books about them, listen to lectures from credible Priests, Priestesses or Mediums about them. Set up a personal altar for them using colors and images that will evoke their energies. For example, for Onishe, aka, Mami Wata or Isis, use white. You can also use some blue as well since blue represents water. For Ikenga, use red and so on. Always have a white candle, if you like candles, for it serves as a neutralizer and purifier during prayers, meditations and rituals. Most importantly, seek contact with your Chi and with your Creator from your heart and you will find the answers you need as well as personal fulfillment. May all that is in your highest good come to fulfillment now and forevermore, Ise!

DEFINITIONS

Omenala/Odinani.

Omenala means laws of the land. Odinani means tied to the land. They both mean the same thing. Omenala is as ancient as human existence on earth. Omenala or Odinani is a socio-spiritual system that is centered around the earth deity, Ani or Ala, and the various forces of nature that represent themselves with the elements of air, water, earth and fire. The system observes a hierarchy, with one's chi or guardian being the focal point that leads to other dimensions such as the Ndiiche/Elevated Ancestors, the Alusi /Deities, Ani/Mother Earth, Chineke/ Father/Mother God and ultimately to Chukwu, the supreme being.

There are millions of Igbo people around the world; in Nigeria (primarily), Guinea, Cameroon and other parts of Africa as well as the United States and the Caribbean where millions of the African population descended from Igbo slaves. But the fact of the matter is, Omenala is not exclusively for the Igbos. Omenala is for all people who dwell inside mother earth.

Igbo Deities

The Alusi/deities are many in Igbo cosmogony. I shall introduce just a few here.

Chukwu- Chukwu or Chi Ukwu is the indescribable, infinite God. Chi-Ukwu literally means the Big God. Everything in Nature is imbued with Chukwu's essence.

Chineke- Chineke is the father/mother creator principle. It is a combination of Chi or Chukwu, the male principle of God and Eke, the female counterpart. Chineke can be translated to mean, the God who creates. It can also be broken down into Chi na eke, meaning Male aspect of God and Female aspect of God. In some traditions, Eke, the female aspect of God, takes Chukwu's position in the cosmic hierarchy.

Ani- Ani or Ala is the earth goddess and everything she represents/embodies. Ani is very central to omenala and is regarded as its highest deity. In some traditions, Ani is considered a male deity.

Kamalu- Kamalu or Amadioha is the god of thunder and lightening. He is also the sky god and consort to the earth goddess, Ani. He dispenses justice while Ani enforces the laws that govern our world. He is also the bringer of rain and is considered benevolent because of this attribute of his.

Ndiiche- Ndiiche are not deities, even though there have been cases where deities incarnated on earth among us. The Ndiiche are esteemed ancestors. To be considered an Ndiiche, one must have lived a blameless life while on earth. Elevated ancestors play the role of Big Brother and Big Sister in a sense. They are often prayed to when wishing for blessings and other favors.

Chi- Chi is one's higher self or god self. It is also one's personal guardian, a spark of God attached to each living creature. One must live life in alignment with their Chi to experience fulfillment. Chi also houses one's destiny. A famous Igbo saying goes, mmadu ekwe, chi ya ekwe, meaning, if man says yes, his Chi will do likewise.

Ikenga- Ikenga is the god of success and industry and also represents one's talents. His symbol is the ram. He represents the divine masculine principle of drive and action. He is held in very high regard in Igbo society.

Mami Wata (Onishe, Idemilli, etc)- Mami Wata is the collective name of a number of water spirits who are responsible for bringing fertility, riches, health and general wellness to individuals and communities. She also bestows the gift of clairvoyance, divination, prophecy and healing to her devotees.

Elemental Spirits- The Igbo people believe in the existence of smaller spirits that dwell and work in accordance with nature for the betterment of our planet. These elemental spirits also represent the four elements of water, air, earth and fire.

There are books out there with detailed information on Igbo cosmogony and the roles of the various deities. Please search for these books at your local African spirituality bookstore or online for more information as needed.

About Ezenwanyi NwaOnishe

Ezenwanyi NwaOnishe is a Prophetess of Onishe. Her calling is ancestral since she comes from a lineage of Queen Mothers and Priestesses. Her mission is to represent the divine feminine by sharing her wisdom and healing properties. You can see more of her channeled writings at www.ezenwanyispeaks.blogspot.com. She is also available for divination. To schedule an appointment, email her at nwaonishe@yahoo.com.

Additional notes: In previous editions of this book, I had used the term Priestess instead of Prophetess to describe my function. Even though I believe we are all Priests and Priestesses at inner levels, I am aware that people with a certain approach to spirituality and religion might assume that I perform religious/spiritual rituals communally, which is not currently the case. I had written this book at a time when I was just attempting to flow with spirit and in the process, did not pay as much attention to semantics the way I should have. Please pardon the error.
